KUTOL Products Company Creates American Manufacturing Jobs in New LEED Silver Certified Manufacturing Plant

October, 2011 -- Searching for a real example of American job creation and environmental stewardship? Look no further than KUTOL Products Company headquartered in Sharonville, Ohio as an example of a family-owned company that not only keeps hand soap manufacturing in the USA, but builds a new manufacturing plant that is responsive to environmental concerns and earns LEED Silver Certification.

Born in the USA

KUTOL Products Company was founded in 1912 as a manufacturer of wallpaper cleaner. When vinyl wallpaper rendered the product obsolete, the company was faced with plummeting sales.

"The wife of our co-founder discovered our wallpaper cleaner was great material for children to use in making Christmas ornaments," states Joe Rhodenbaugh, president of KUTOL Products Company. "Thus, America's favorite modeling clay, Play-Doh™, was born."

Eventually, the company split into two entities which enabled KUTOL to continue concentrating on its core competency — hand soap manufacturing. "Americans have become more educated about the health benefits of hand cleansing, which has led to a greater demand for our line of hand hygiene products," explains Rhodenbaugh.

As the consumption of hand soap products increased, it became clear that the company would need to expand its manufacturing capabilities. "We have always manufactured our products in the USA, as we believe in the integrity and quality of the American worker," Rhodenbaugh says. "There was never a doubt our new manufacturing plant would be built in America."

Kutol Products Company given 2011 Sustainability Award

DULLES, VA — National Independent Sanitary Supply Companies (NISSCO) has recognized the sustainability efforts of Kutol Products Company by awarding the company its 2011 Preferred Supplier Sustainability Award at the 2011 ISSA/INTERCLEAN trade show, according to a press release.

Kutol Products Company, known for its extensive line of hand hygiene products, recently obtained Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design (LEED) Silver certification for its new headquarters and manufacturing plant located in Sharonville, Ohio, the release stated.

According to the release, the plant is one of the first manufacturing plants in the JanSan industry to earn this distinguished LEED Silver certification and one of just 2,700 in the country.

"Our industry has had a substantial impact on raising the general public's awareness of the environment and healthier cleaning alternatives," said Mark Bozich, president of NISSCO.

"Now, our industry is moving from promoting green to the larger picture of supporting sustainability. KUTOL is a shining example of a manufacturer that fully embraces sustainability in its production and leads the industry by obtaining one of the industry's first LEED Silver certifications," Bozich added.

The new KUTOL facility was built from the ground up, with a focus on sustainability and the environment, and depends upon geothermal energy generated from an adjacent pond to conserve energy costs, the release noted.

Sustainability, LEED Certification

DULLES, VA -- NISSCO recognized the sustainability efforts of Kutol Products Co. by awarding it the 2011 Preferred Supplier Sustainability Award at the ISSA/InterClean trade show held last week in Las Vegas.

Kutol, known for its extensive line of hand hygiene products, recently obtained LEED Silver Certification for its new headquarters and manufacturing plant located in Sharonville, Ohio. It is one of the first manufacturing plants in the jan-san industry to earn this distinguished LEED Silver certification and one of just 2,700 in the country.

"Our industry has had a substantial impact on raising the general public's awareness of the environment and healthier cleaning alternatives," said Bozich. "Now, our industry is moving from promoting green to the larger picture of supporting sustainability. KUTOL is a shining example of a manufacturer that fully embraces sustainability in its production and leads the industry by obtaining one of the industry's first LEED Silver certifications."

The new KUTOL facility was built from the ground up, with a focus on sustainability and the environment, choosing to build on a defunct government storage site. "As construction workers cleared the site, approximately 8 million pounds of old concrete was pulverized and used creating new concrete," said Joe Rhodenbaugh, president of KUTOL Products Company. "Overall, we were able to recycle over 95% of construction waste and more than double our capacity with our expanded space and investment in state-of-the-art equipment."

The new facility depends upon geothermal energy generated from an adjacent pond to conserve energy costs. Some statistics show geothermal heat pumps use 25% - 50% less electricity than conventional heating or cooling systems. Best of all, about 70% of the energy used is renewable energy from the ground.

For greater energy savings, KUTOL installed high efficiency lighting with motion-sensor controls. Special CO2 monitors control the mix of fresh air to inside air to assure consistent indoor air quality. The company chose low-to-zero VOC carpet and paint, and used opportunities for natural light.

KUTOL Products Company manufactures hundreds of different hand hygiene products from moisturizing liquid soap to hard-working pumice-based options, all in the United States, at this manufacturing facility. There is a full range of antibacterial soaps and sanitizing foams and gels, as well as environmentally certified, Green Seal products. The company also offers a bio-based hand sanitizer that is dye and fragrance-free.

National Independent Sanitary Supply Companies (NISSCO, LLC) is an association of more than 225 major distributors of janitorial and maintenance supplies throughout North America. NISSCO represents in excess of $2 billion in group purchases and negotiates advantaged contracts, pricing, and revenue streams for its members with over 80 major manufacturers.

Changing the Way the World Views Cleaning

Focus on improving human health, reducing environmental impact, and positively influencing facilities' and members' bottom lines

ISSA is launching a multifaceted new endeavor designed to help members gain greater acceptance of the positive impact of cleaning and assist in navigating the ongoing challenges facing the industry.

and other health issues continue to reshape the scope and impact of the global cleaning industry.

To help members address these issues, ISSA is dedicating its resources and expertise to more effectively educate the commercial market about the vital impact cleaning has on human health, the environment, and the bottom line (including tenant retention, reduced employee absenteeism, increased savings, and extended asset lifecycles).

The association's new position is meant to reflect the forward direction its members are taking each day to provide state-of-the-art cleaning processes and products, change perceptions of cleaning and protect public health. This focus is reflected in multiple new programs as well as ISSA's new logo and tagline – "Advancing Clean. Driving Innovation."

Ongoing market consolidations, cost to ensure facility decision makers take full advantage of the measurable impact cleaning can have on both their operational and financial success, and to ensure they – and the world – view cleaning not as an expense to be minimized, but as the vital investment it truly is.

Moreover, ISSA is improving upon the communications, tools, and advocacy

KUTOL Products Company Creates American Manufacturing Jobs in New LEED Silver Certified Manufacturing Plant

Searching for an example of American job creation and environmental stewardship? Look no further than KUTOL Products Company, a family-owned company that keeps hand soap manufacturing in the US in a new LEED Silver Certified manufacturing plant.

SHARONVILLE, OH, November 10, 2011 /24-7PressRelease/ -- Searching for a real example of American job creation and environmental stewardship? Look no further than KUTOL Products Company headquartered in Sharonville, Ohio as an example of a family-owned company that not only keeps manufacturing in the USA, but builds a new manufacturing plant that is responsive to environmental concerns and earns LEED Silver Certification.

Born in the USA

KUTOL Products Company was founded in 1912 as a manufacturer of wallpaper cleaner. When vinyl wallpaper rendered the product obsolete, the company was faced with plummeting sales.

"The wife of our co-founder discovered our wallpaper cleaner was great material for children to use in making Christmas ornaments," states Joe Rhodenbaugh, president of KUTOL Products Company. "Thus, America's favorite modeling clay, Play-Doh, was born."

Eventually, the company split into two entities which enabled KUTOL to continue concentrating on its core competency -- hand soap manufacturing. "Americans have become more educated about the health benefits of hand cleansing, which has led to a greater demand for our line of hand hygiene products," explains Rhodenbaugh.

Kutol: 100 Years Of American Hand Soap At Its Sustainable Best

Kutol Products Company has a winning trifecta for success — product ingenuity, American-made manufacturing and cost-effective environmental practices.

"Throughout our 100 years in business, we have successfully adapted to changing markets," states Joe Rhodenbaugh, president of Kutol Products Company.

"Some might say we have had some very extreme market challenges."

Founded in 1912 as a manufacturer of wallpaper cleaner, the company transformed its product into America's favorite modeling clay, Play-Doh, to revive sales after vinyl wallpaper rendered it obsolete.

The company evolved again as it expanded its hand soap manufacturing.

As the need for hand cleaners grew, so did Kutol.

Made In America

Since all Kutol soap products are manufactured in the United States, the increased demand for its products required a larger manufacturing space.

It was clear the company would need to build a new facility from the bottom up.

"In building our new headquarters, we placed a tremendous amount of importance on being as environmentally sensitive as possible," says Rhodenbaugh. "Every step in construction considered its ultimate environmental impact."

Because construction was approached in this manner, the new Kutol headquarters earned Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design (LEED) certification at the Silver level — a designation just over 2,700 facilities in the country can claim.

Kutol is one of the first manufacturing plants in the JanSan industry to earn LEED certification.

Unconventionally Sustainable

The large pond adjacent to the headquarters is more than just a "water-front view."

Underneath the water is a system of pipes that comprise a geothermal system — a process that uses the Earth's consistent temperatures to create heating and cooling energy.

Some statistics show geothermal heat pumps use 25 percent to 50 percent less electricity than conventional heating or cooling systems with about 70 percent being from renewable energy.

The building also uses natural light and high-efficiency lighting with motion-sensor controls.

Water is conserved with low-flow faucets, electronic dual-flush fixtures and a mechanism to capture rainwater for re-use in irrigation.

As Kutol demolished the previous government storage site for its new headquarters, huge dumpsters separated wood, plastic and metal for recycling.

The biggest recycling effort was the expansive concrete pad.

"As we cleared the site, approximately 8,000,000 pounds of old concrete was pulverized and recycled for new concrete," states Rhodenbaugh. "Overall, we were able to recycle over 95 percent of construction waste."

Recycling did not end with construction, as recycling containers are found throughout the facility in both the office area and on the manufacturing floor.

From this new headquarters, the company manufactures hundreds of different hand hygiene products from moisturizing liquid soap to hard-working pumice-based options.

There is a full range of antibacterial soaps and sanitizing foams and gels, as well as environmentally certified foam and liquid products.

Kutol's line of Green Seal-certified foam and liquid hand cleansing products includes Foaming Dye & Fragrance-Free hand soap for allergen-sensitive users.

The company also offers bio-based hand sanitizers that are also dye and fragrance-free. CM

KUTOL Products Company Creates American Manufacturing Jobs in New LEED Silver Certified Manufacturing Plant

October, 2011 -- Searching for a real example of American job creation and environmental stewardship? Look no further than KUTOL Products Company headquartered in Sharonville, Ohio as an example of a family-owned company that not only keeps hand soap manufacturing in the USA, but builds a new manufacturing plant that is responsive to environmental concerns and earns LEED Silver Certification.

Born in the USA

KUTOL Products Company was founded in 1912 as a manufacturer of wallpaper cleaner. When vinyl wallpaper rendered the product obsolete, the company was faced with plummeting sales.

"The wife of our co-founder discovered our wallpaper cleaner was great material for children to use in making Christmas ornaments," states Joe Rhodenbaugh, president of KUTOL Products Company. "Thus, America's favorite modeling clay, Play-Doh™, was born."

Eventually, the company split into two entities which enabled KUTOL to continue concentrating on its core competency — hand soap manufacturing. "Americans have become more educated about the health benefits of hand cleansing, which has led to a greater demand for our line of hand hygiene products," explains Rhodenbaugh.

As the consumption of hand soap products increased, it became clear that the company would need to expand its manufacturing capabilities. "We have always manufactured our products in the USA, as we believe in the integrity and quality of the American worker," Rhodenbaugh says. "There was never a doubt our new manufacturing plant would be built in America."

KUTOL PRODUCTS COMPANY RECEIVES 2011 NISSCO SUSTAINABILITY AWARD

Recognizes KUTOL LEED SILVER Certification; One of Industry's FIRST

A photograph showing four men standing in front of a KUTOL booth. One man is handing a certificate to another. The booth has a large "KUTOL" sign and a display of products.

National Independent Sanitary Supply Companies (NISSCO) recognized the sustainability efforts of Kutol Products Company by awarding the company its 2011 Preferred Supplier Sustainability Award at the ISSA Show, recently held in Las Vegas.

Kutol Products Company, known for its extensive line of hand hygiene products, recently obtained LEED Silver Certification for its new headquarters and manufacturing plant located in Sharonville, Ohio. It is one of the first manufacturing plants in the JanSan Industry to earn the distinguished LEED Silver certification and one of approximately 100 manufacturing plants in the country with this designation.

"Our industry has had a substantial impact on raising the general public's awareness of the environment and healthier cleaning alternatives," points out Bozich. "Now, our industry is moving from promoting green to the larger picture of supporting sustainability. KUTOL is a shining example of a manufacturer that fully embraces sustainability in its production and leads the industry by obtaining one of the industry's first LEED Silver certifications."

The new KUTOL facility was built from the ground up, with a focus on sustainability and the environment, choosing to build on a defunct government storage site. "As construction workers cleared the site, approximately 8,000,000 pounds of old concrete was pulverized and used creating new concrete," points out Joe Rhodenbaugh, president of KUTOL Products Company. "Overall, we were able to recycle over 95% of construction waste and more than double our capacity with our expanded space and investment in state-of-the-art equipment."

The new facility depends upon geothermal energy generated from an adjacent pond to conserve energy costs. Some statistics show geothermal heat pumps use 25% - 50% less electricity than conventional heating or cooling systems. Best of all, about 70% of the energy used is renewable energy from the ground.

For greater energy savings, KUTOL installed high efficiency lighting with motion-sensor controls. Special CO2 monitors control the mix of fresh air to inside air to assure consistent indoor air quality. The company chose low-to-zero VOC carpet and paint, and used opportunities
